Enter the fast-paced healthcare industry.

Over the next several weeks, students will be lining up at Concorde Career Institute in North Hollywood to begin classes designed to prepare them for careers as Dental Assistants, Insurance Coding Specialists, Medical Assistants, Respiratory Therapists, Surgical Technicians, and Vocational Nurses.

“Orientation and the first week of classes is a particularly exciting time at Concorde as the students get measured for their uniforms and begin the training that, for many of them, will change their lives,” according to Michael Kerwin, Concorde’s Campus Director.

Job outlook and growth projects from the U.S. Department of Labor through the year 2006 underscore excellent job opportunities for graduates of allied health technical programs. As the field of allied health becomes larger and larger, healthcare professionals are in high demand. Concorde is a recognized leader in training students for these important jobs.

Meeting students’ needs has always been key at Concorde. By focusing on first-rate teaching, strong student service, and flexible course scheduling, the school seeks to prepare students for careers with good pay and benefits and long-term opportunities for advancement. In addition to the realistic laboratory environment at Concorde, you will also obtain hands-on working experience called an externship.

“At Concorde, we’re dedicated to helping our students succeed,” says Kerwin. “Our admissions process is simple and easy to complete. Financial assistance is available to those who qualify, and our graduate services department works closely with students and graduates in preparing them for externships and placement.”

Concorde provides outstanding career training in short, manageable programs with classes during the day and evening, says Kerwin. “Our students enjoy hands-on training from medical professionals. As a matter of fact, Concorde currently employs two M.D.s as tutors for those students who need help. And, all Concorde programs also include on-the-job training in clinical rotations and externships served at area hospitals and medical care facilities,” he says.

More than 10,000 allied health professionals have been trained at Concorde in North Hollywood, formerly Valley College, since the college opened in 1955, according to Kerwin. Concorde graduates are working at major hospitals, clinics and medical and dental offices throughout the Valley and greater Los Angeles area, he says.

Concorde offers the following programs:

- Dental Assistants
- Insurance Coding Specialists
- Medical Assistants
- Respiratory Therapists
- Surgical Technicians
- Vocational Nurses
